Plan of the Boarding School.

NAZARETH HALL has been in successful operation as a Public Boarding School, since October 3d, 1785.

The spacious building was erected in 1755 and 1756, for the residence of the German Count Zinzendorf, who however did not return from Europe to occupy it.

In June, 1759, a private Boarding School, for the sons of Moravian parents, was begun in this edifice, and, excepting an interval of four years, (from 1780 till 1784,) the Hall building, has now been occupied for the purpose of a Boarding School, nearly one hundred years.

The locality of Nazareth Hall, (in the thriving village of Nazareth,) has all the advantages which are desirable as to salubrity of situation,—with beautiful scenery, good water, pleasant walks, and play-grounds.

There are telegraphic and daily traveling and express communications with New York by the New Jersey Central Rail-Road from Easton, seven miles from Nazareth, and with Philadelphia by the North Pennsylvania Railroad from Bethlehem, ten miles from Nazareth.

The plan of study has always been arranged with the full intention of developing the mental faculties by thorough and patient instruction, and laying a good and solid foundation on which the pupil may safely build, when he leaves school, either to enter into practical life, or to prosecute his studies at College.

The regular course embraces: Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Orthography, (or Dictation,) History, Geography, Composition, Elocution, English Grammar, Logic, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Astronomy, Geology, Book-Keeping, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, Physiology, Constitution of the United States, German, and Instruction in Vocal Music.

The special course includes certain of these branches, and such of the following, (for which extra charges are made,) as the scholars may desire ;—Greek, Latin, Spanish, French, Drawing, Painting, Instruction on the Piano Forte, Melodeon, Organ, Violin, Flute, and other musical instruments.

The pupils are divided into Room companies or divisions, according to their age ; they attend classes according to proficiency in their various studies, and are constantly under the superintendence of several Teachers. As much attention as possible is paid to their religious, moral, and physical training. No sectarian views are inculcated in the School. All the scholars are expected to attend the religious exercises of the Institution, which are for the most part conducted by the Principal.

For securing good conduct, the Principal relies upon the personal influence of the Teachers,—the presentation of proper motives, and such measures of discipline, as particular cases may require.

Age of admission from nine to fourteen years, and only such scholars retained, as are of generally good, moral habits, and willing to render a cheerful obedience to the rules and regulations of the School.

Books and Stationery are provided at the usual prices ; and articles of apparel, &c., if desired, will be furnished by the Institution to any amount, to which funds are placed in the hands of the Principal for these special purposes. All clothing should be marked legibly and fully, to prevent mistakes or losses.—The pupils are not allowed to have their clothing in their own hands, but it must be deposited in the Clothing Room, whose superintendent daily supplies the scholars with what they require to wear.

In addition to his general wardrobe, each pupil must furnish himself with half a dozen towels, and napkins. All table furniture is provided by the Institution.

A monthly allowance of pocket money, varying from twenty-five to fifty cents is permitted, but the contracting of debts by the scholars is strictly prohibited.
